New Type Houses

Furnish Quarters
For Baby Chicks

(By Nell Fannin Hutchison)

The National Food For Defense Program has brought to Coffee County a return of the spirit of pioneer log-cabin days when neighbors gathered to lend a hand at the heavy task.

The present emergency concerns larger quarters for those in need of a return of the spirit of pioneer log-cabin days when neighbors gathered to lend a hand at the heavy task.

Range houses are being built to fill this need. In order to save time and facilitate construction, all the men of a community gather at one home, where a range house is built by the entire group.

Supervisors. Later, working by twos and threes in their own communities, farmers will construct the needed houses throughout the county.

REPLANTING OF GARDENS

AFTER RAIN IS ADVISED

Gardens which have died during the drought can be kept clean of weeds and grasses and replanted to good advantage after rains are obtained.

"The ground," according to L. M. Ware, extension station horticulturist, "must be disturbed as little as possible during the drought so that the amount of moisture available and any surviving plants will not be lost.

Planting after rains can be done without further preparation to the land where crops have died. Only a small furrow is advised. If plantings are not to follow crop failures, then preparation and fertilization are necessary, after which another rain is needed before planting for best results.

Lima and snap beans, okra and corn can be planted when the moisture is sufficient. Transplanting of tomatoes, eggplants and peppers also are suggested by Ware.
